✠ POETRY CORNER ✠

EASTER DAWN

by Malcolm Guite (1957-)

He blesses every love which weeps and grieves
And now he blesses hers who stood and wept
And would not be consoled, or leave her love's
Last touching place, but watched as low light crept
Up from the east. A sound behind her stirs
A scatter of bright birdsong through the air.
She turns, but cannot focus through her tears,
Or recognise the Gardener standing there.
She hardly hears his gentle question 'Why,
Why are you weeping?', or sees the play of light
That brightens as she chokes out her reply
'They took my love away, my day is night'
And then she hears her name, she hears Love say
The Word that turns her night, and ours, to Day.

✠ DEVOTIONAL VIGNETTE ✠

WHEN early Christian artists adorned the catacombs with pictures, one of their themes was Jesus the Good Shepherd. What they had first in mind, no doubt, was Jesus as shepherd of the dead. But, remarkably, they represented the Good Shepherd as shepherd of the stars. He is the cosmic shepherd, the universal shepherd, whose watchful care infuses and governs the whole order of creation, and brings it to its final redemption in himself: "there shall be one flock and one shepherd".

"In the Catacombs" Evelyn Stuart Hardy (1865-1935)

When we celebrate Jesus as the Good Shepherd, as we do today, what we celebrate is the universal providence of God, made manifest to us in the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ; and that is, of course, why this Gospel lesson belongs to Eastertide. We celebrate the universal providence of God, that watchful care, that unwearied love which governs all creation, from the highest angel to the least atom. "Not a sparrow falleth without your heavenly father." By ways mysterious, past our finding out, the world is shepherded. Even from our evils, he makes good to come; even from our dying, he makes resurrection. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and staff comfort me".

We celebrate the providence of God, and it is profoundly important that we do so, because that is the basic principle upon which our moral and spiritual life as Christians must be founded. The ultimate truth of things is not evil, but good; the power which truly governs at this and every moment is the love of God. "O God, thou hast searched me out and known me; thou knowest my down-sitting and up-rising: thou understandest my thoughts long before". That all-embracing providence is sure and steadfast, and surely manifest in Jesus Christ. He is the Good Shepherd who gives his life for the sheep.
